"Finding life after loss: A journey of faith and healing"

Ken Tork, a native Texan, has been a self-defense instructor in the Seattle area for almost two decades. After losing his only son Kevin in 2009, he has dedicated himself to raising awareness of the dangers and consequences, we all face, when our children participate in the high-risk activities that are so rampant in today's culture. His unique presentation is uplifting and inspirational. Ken's presentation is an interactive experience that uses a mixture of faith, truth, humor and audience participation to help others understand the realities of how losing a child affects the family and the community. In addition, what each of us can do to best help someone who has suffered a traumatic event. You will leave filled with hope knowing that recovery is possible and that even after the worst of tragedies we can find life again.
